MEDICAID

Qualifications for Medicaid in Nevada:

What are the requirements for Medicaid in Nevada? If you do not understand how to qualify for Medicaid, you must review the standards enforced by the state. Since Medicaid benefits eligibility varies on a state-to-state basis, it is important to understand the requirements developed by Nevada, alone. For example, if you qualify for Medicaid in Utah, it does not automatically mean you are eligible for Medicaid in Nevada, as well. There are several factors that determine your Medicaid eligibility. What are the income requirements for Medicaid in Nevada? Since Medicaid is a government-sponsored medical assistance program that provides benefits to low-earning patients in need, income requirements for Medicaid play a major role in your eligibility.

Who is Eligible for Medicaid in Nevada?:

What are the requirements for Medicaid in terms of different groups of patients in Nevada? In order to meet Medicaid eligibility requirements in NV, you must belong to a designated medical group, first. As mentioned, how to qualify for Medicaid varies depending on the state in which you reside.

The following patients can gain eligibility for Medicaid benefits in Nevada:

- Low-income adults and children
 - Children under 19 through Nevada Check Up
 - Non-citizens in need of emergency medical assistance
 - Pregnant women
 - Newborns that reside with their mothers in Nevada
 - Parents or caretaker relatives
 - Previously fostered adults ages 18 to 26
 - Uninsured or underinsured women under 65 who need treatments related to cervical cancer and breast cancer
 - Certain child welfare cases involving children who need partial or full financial assistance from a public agency
- Additional Medicaid eligibility groups include the elderly, the blind, the disabled and the working disabled, along with several types of eligible Medicare beneficiaries

Nevada Medicaid Requirements:

What are the Medicaid application guidelines when it comes to non-financial eligibility? Like all other states, Nevada employs a list of Medicaid requirements unrelated to the income of your household.

The first Medicaid qualification you must meet is to be a U.S. citizen. Have citizenship documents or proof of your legal presence in the country on-hand in order to qualify for Medicaid. If you do not have proof of your lawful presence in the United States, you may still be eligible for health coverage. In Nevada, illegal non-citizens may qualify for emergency medical assistance on a month-to-month basis, depending on the circumstances.

Next, in order to be eligible for Medicaid in Nevada, you must be able to prove your residency. You cannot attain Medicaid benefits eligibility if you relocate outside of Nevada. Your Medicaid benefits do not transfer over from one state to another. Have handy proof of your residence in Nevada for Medicaid eligibility purposes. Generally, your DMV driver's license or your valid state ID card will support that you reside within state lines. You also need to have a registered Social Security Number to remain eligible for Medicaid. In fact, all government-sponsored programs statewide require this federal identification number. So, whether you want to qualify for Medicaid, for food stamps or for cash assistance, you need to have your Social Security Number accessible.

There are also requirements for Medicaid patients who are disabled, former foster children or beneficiaries of Medicare. Have paperwork nearby to support these instances if they apply, so you can confirm you are eligible for Medicaid benefits in a timely manner.

Income Requirements for Medicaid in Nevada:

What are the income requirements for Medicaid in Nevada? Now that you have reviewed the other Medicaid eligibility factors, your financial status is the last remaining factor. Medicaid income requirements are determined by the Modified Adjusted Gross Income (MAGI) system, and take into account the total earnings of your household, depending on its size.

As a child or a low-income adult, you qualify for Medicaid in NV if the income of your home is no more than 138 percent of the federal poverty level. In addition, Medicaid Check Up is available to children under the age of 19 whose household incomes total no more than 205 percent of the federal poverty level. Pregnant women are eligible for Medicaid in Nevada if incomes only total up to 165 percent of the federal poverty level, and no more.

Adults who are between the ages of 19 and 64 that qualify for Medicaid eligibility in all other realms may not earn more than 138 of the federal poverty level to enroll in NV Medicaid.

Those who receive SSI and/or RSDI, disabled adults, widows and widowers recognized through public law, the aged, the blind and those receiving nursing, in-home or community-based care and assisted living services have income requirements based on other benefits, as well as strict resource limits up to $2,000 in order to meet Medicaid eligibility in Nevada.

The following groups qualify for Medicaid in Nevada regardless of income: adults formerly in foster care, women with cervical cancer or breast cancer and children who depend on the financial assistance of a public agency.

Nevada Medicaid Eligibility Pre-Screening Tool:

What are the Medicaid application guidelines for online Medicaid eligibility in Nevada? You can determine if you are eligible for Medicaid quickly, thanks to Access Nevada. There is a pre-screening tool available that can help you understand the requirements to be eligible for Medicaid in just a matter of minutes. Simply answer the questions related to Medicaid requirements and soon after, the test will generate an accurate response regarding your available Medicaid benefits. Keep in mind that the pre-screening Medicaid benefits eligibility tool is unrelated to the NV Medicaid application process.

- As you prepare to find out if you qualify for Medicaid, gather the details that relate to the following:
 - The number of members residing in your home, including a spouse or a dependent you may claim on your tax return
 - The ages of any children living in your household under 6 years old, as well as those between ages 6 and 19
 - If anyone is currently pregnant in your household
 - If anyone receives Supplemental Security Income
 - Whether or not anyone in your home is 65 and older, and also qualifies or already receives Medicare benefits
 - Your expectant income for the upcoming year, which is the gross income of all members residing in your current household
- If you qualify for Medicaid based on the web results from the above tool, you will then be directed to the Nevada Department of Health and Human Services' Division of Welfare and Supportive Services. Once there, you will be prompted to create an Access Nevada account to begin your Medicaid application.

How does one meet Medicaid's non-financial guidelines? First of all, the applicant must be a resident of the state of Nevada. The length of his or her Nevada residency does not matter. SECTION 8 INFORMATION

Section 8 Housing in Nevada:

In Nevada, Section 8 is a program that offers aid to low-income families and individuals who are having trouble finding affordable housing. Section 8 housing is a federally funded, government run program, whose aim is to subsidize qualified apartments and homes for petitioners who meet eligibility requirements. The Department of Housing and Urban Development, or HUD, is the program's administering agency, but the Nevada Regional Housing Authorities (NRHA) administers Section 8 at the local level. The local HUD authority is responsible for issuing and maintaining housing vouchers, verifying qualified candidates and maintaining the waiting lists.

Currently, Nevada's low income house rentals include ten thousand vouchers which have aided nearly 38,000 people in 2016. The Nevada housing authority ensures that the low income housing applicants who qualify for Section 8 are placed on the waiting list and are notified once a place becomes available. Applicants who qualify for Section 8 housing will be required to follow guidelines set forth by the NRHA, or they may be dropped from the program. Learn more about Section 8 in Nevada by reading through the topics below:

- Section 8 eligibility in Nevada
- How to apply for Section 8 housing in Nevada
- Information about Section 8 waiting lists in Nevada
- Section 8 denials in Nevada

Section 8 Eligibility in Nevada:

Nevada Section 8 eligibility is largely based on an applicant's income and background. What are the qualifications for low income housing in Nevada? For most Section 8 applicants, the largest qualifier will be income. Proof of income in the form of current tax returns, pay stubs and assets must be disclosed truthfully. Taking income into consideration, most section 8 applicants ask themselves "Do I qualify for Section 8 housing?" Applicants, who fall well below the poverty line for income, are currently homeless, have disabled family members, or have household members younger than 18, may qualify to be placed ahead of others on the Section 8 waiting list in Nevada.

Currently, HUD releases an annual report that lists Section 8 income requirements for the year. Because income requirements can shift from year to year, applicants are required to check the current income limits often to see if they still qualify for Section 8 benefits. Section 8 applicants can access the annual report online and view other qualifying rules as well.

What are the requirements for Section 8 in Nevada?

To be eligible for Section 8 benefits, an applicant and all household members must not have been convicted of any criminal activity. Registered sexual offenders and individuals who have been evicted from Section 8 housing in the past are not eligible for Section 8 benefits and housing.

What do I need to apply for Section 8 in Nevada?

To apply for Section 8 in Nevada, you will need to submit a number of documents along with the section 8 application. The main documentation required is proof of income from the applicant and every adult member in the household. Additionally, Section 8 applicants and each household member must also provide proof of citizenship and a list of all assets. All of the necessary Section 8 forms are available online or at the NRHA offices and must be submitted with the appropriate documentation. Applicants must sign all of the appropriate locations on the Section 8 form for the application to be accepted.

How to Apply for Section 8 Housing in Nevada:

Learning how to sign up for Section 8 housing is crucial for low income housing petitioners. Most applications are denied because the forms are completed incorrectly. The HUD Section 8 application must be filled out completely, with appropriate signatures in order to be accepted. In Nevada, there is no online application for low income housing, and all applications must be submitted in person, unless the applicant is disabled or elderly. All applications, whether hand delivered or mailed, will take several weeks to process.

To register for Section 8 housing program in Nevada, each petitioner must also provide proof of in-state residency. Acceptable residency documents include utility bills or property tax statement. Applicants who would like to check status for Section 8 application forms are urged to wait at least 15 days before making an inquiry.

Information About Section 8 Waiting Lists in Nevada:

Nevada's Section 8 housing waiting list can be viewed online, or can be obtained from the NRHA by written request. Qualifying applicants are placed on the waiting list once it has been determined that they meet the eligibility requirements. Placement on the list is dependent upon the date and time the application was approved. However, applicants who are disabled, homeless, elderly or living in extreme poverty will be moved ahead of others on the list. The waiting list can change from month to month and is only open a few times a year.

When will the Section 8 waiting lists open?

The current waiting time for individuals on the list is 12 to 36 months. The Section 8 housing program application waiting lists can fluctuate, so applicants are encouraged to check it a few times per week. Receiving a letter of eligibility means that the applicant will be placed on the waiting list, but does not guarantee immediate housing will be made available. Low income housing waiting lists are notoriously long in the state of Nevada. Applicants can check waiting list status for Section 8 applications at any time online, or by visiting to the local NRHA office in person.

Section 8 Denials in Nevada:

A Section 8 denial letter is issued to applicants whose documentation or verification process was unable to be completed. What are the reasons for Section 8 denial in Nevada? Many factors can render an application invalid. One of the most common reasons for Section 8 denial is that the applicant's background check yields results that are not in line with NRHA eligibility requirements. In some instances, Section 8 housing disqualifications are due to the fact that the income or assets of the combined household members is over the minimum income requirement. Another reason for Section 8 denial is when the applicant does not sign the forms in all of the required places. The denial letter will indicate exactly why the application was rejected. The letter will also describe what to do if Section 8 application was denied. During a Section 8 denial appeal, the application will be reviewed once more to see if compliance has been met. The appeal must be made shortly after the Section 8 denial letter is received in order to be valid. Section 8 applicants who have been denied housing subsidies may wish to request legal counsel. When it comes to how to appeal Section 8 denial letters, legal counsel can best advise the petitioner on their rights and next steps.

TANF FACTS & INFORMATION

Purpose:

The purpose of the TANF program is to provide temporary assistance for the care of dependent children in their own homes or the homes of relatives by furnishing financial assistance, and self-sufficiency services.

Funding:

TANF is federally funded through a block grant from the Department of Health and Human Services. States are required to contribute money equal to 80% of the amount spent on the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) and related programs during federal fiscal year 1994. This is the state's Maintenance of Effort (MOE) requirements.

- Types of TANF Benefits:

- The Division of Welfare and Supportive Services (DWSS) administers five different TANF benefit programs. Two programs are considered assistance by federal definition and three are considered non-assistance programs. Nevada recognizes family situations vary and the approach for some to meeting their immediate and ongoing needs should be different. When a family may qualify for more than one category, the family has the final decision on which category they wish to receive.

Age / School Requirements:

- The head of household must ensure their children age 7 to 12 attend school as required by state law and take every reasonable action to ensure the child is not at risk of failing to advance to the next grade level.
- A child age 18 or over, not in school full-time, is ineligible.
- A child age 18 in school (high school, technical or vocational, includes GED program) full time and expected to graduate before or in the month of their 19th birthday is eligible for TANF through their graduation month.
- A child who will not graduate, or complete their GED, until after the month of their 19th birthday is ineligible the month following their 18th birthday.
- For minor parents to be eligible for assistance, they must be enrolled and attending high school or actively participating in a GED program and making adequate progress.

Agreement of Cooperation:

Adult household member(s) must sign an Agreement of Cooperation which includes their responsibilities as a condition of receiving benefits and describes the penalties that may be imposed for failure to comply.

Assessment:

- (Applies to TANF/NEON, Loan and Child-Only):
 - An assessment is required for each household member to evaluate existing skills, prior work experience and employability. It also determines the family needs including job training, child care, substance abuse treatment, mental health services, domestic violence services, or other issues which may be barriers to self-sufficiency.
- Additional information can be found at <https://dwss.nv.gov/TANF>
